PROJECTS

C2RTL: A High-Level Synthesis tool

- Developed a high-level synthesis tool named C2RTL that can generate synthesizable Verilog RTL for pipelined ASIC from C code.
- It was designed as a GCC plugin. It takes intermediate code (produced by GCC) as an input and generates control and data-flow graph (CDFG) for that. It then performs scheduling and MUX tree generation before producing the Verilog code.
- Evaluated the generated Verilog code with OpenROAD

CP-Trie: A Longest Prefix Match algorithm in Software and ASIC

- Developed several bitmap and Trie based longest prefix match algorithms such as (CP-Trie, Poptrie and SAIL) for IPv6 routing table lookup.
- Evaluated the algorithms with routes from real core routers.

NC-TCP: A congestion control in Linux kernel

- Developed several router assisted congestion control (XCP, RCP and NC-TCP) in Linux kernel.
- Evaluated the protocols using Mininet and a GStreamer based video streaming application.
